

The Border Papers

“The Border Papers” is a special C.D. Howe Institute Commentary series examining specific policy challenges Canada faces as it moves toward deeper Western Hemispheric integration, beginning with the United States. The first paper in the series frames the overall issues; other papers will examine such policy areas as border issues, mechanisms for resolving trade and investment disputes, energy, immigration, and defense policy. The series will conclude with a capstone paper. Each paper will outline available options and offer policy recommendations. A central concern of the series is to answer the question, should deepening integration be managed incrementally or would a Big Idea better advance Canada's strategic interests?

Financial support for the series has been generously provided by the Donner Canadian Foundation.

An independent Advisory Group provides guidance on the overall direction of “The Border Papers.” Its members are:
