

MANAGING EDITOR

The C.D. Howe Institute, Canada's leading independent, nonprofit research institution, based in Toronto, seeks a Managing Editor. This senior position will interest an energetic, motivated individual who enjoys producing publications that have an important impact on Canadian public policy debates.

The successful candidate will be part of a small but dynamic team, working with in-house and outside authors, support staff, freelance editors, artists, and printers to produce books and other types of publications, both print and electronic. The candidate will also be responsible for media relations and communication strategy. Top-notch English-language writing and editing skills, a minimum of 5 years' experience in publishing and journalism (including managing budgets and the workflow of publications), and a keen eye for detail are a must, as is proficiency in such software programs as MS Word, Corel WordPerfect, and QuarkXpress. A working knowledge of French and familiarity with the Internet would be important assets.

The Institute offers an attractive benefits package and competitive remuneration. Contact:
