Most cited think tank in the Globe and Mail and National Post, Canada’s two national dailies.
The C.D. Howe Institute continues its long-standing tradition of being a trusted and impartial voice for independent, non-partisan economic research, and 2023 was certainly no exception. The Institute’s in-depth research and commentary on top-of-mind issues facing Canadians, including on the topics of healthcare, energy and tax policy, have been truly inspirational.

Among the many accomplishments in the past year, 2023 marked the launch of the new Centre of Financial and Monetary Policy. Led by Jeremy Kronick, Associate Vice President and Director of the Centre, the Centre of Financial and Monetary Policy aims to be the foremost hub of influence and direction on critical and emerging issues in both financial and monetary policy. I am greatly looking forward to watching the Centre’s continued growth and advancement in 2024 and the years ahead.

I would also like to congratulate Jeremy and his co-authors, Steve Ambler and Thorsten Koeppl for their 2023 Purvis Prize win for their publication “The Consequences of the Bank of Canada’s Ballooned Balance Sheet.” Their work examined the Bank of Canada’s balance sheet, which ballooned during the COVID-19 pandemic, and calls for changes to the Bank of Canada Act to allow the Bank to deal with losses due to rising interest rates. This marks the Institute’s seventh time winning this prize.

Finally, it is with great sadness that I acknowledge the passing of Donald Reimer on November 12, 2023. Donald was a long-standing Member of the Board, having served since his initial appointment in 2006, and we are very grateful to have benefitted from his ongoing support and advice. We will miss him and his many contributions, and I would like to personally extend my deepest condolences to his family, friends and associates. His absence will not go unnoticed.

On behalf of the Board, I would like to thank Bill Robson, CEO, and Duncan Munn, President, for their enduring leadership, hard work and dedication to the Institute.

Sincerely,
Hugh L. MacKinnon
It is a pleasure to tell the C.D. Howe Institute’s friends and supporters that the Institute is thriving – as the reviews of its publications, events, and communications in 2023 elsewhere in this Annual Report describe. All the more so, because the economic mood in Canada as we go into 2024 is sombre. With Canada’s economic and fiscal challenges as serious as they are, and worsening in key respects, a vigorous C.D. Howe Institute is all the more important for Canada.

As many readers of the Annual Report know too well, incomes and output per Canadian have been declining since 2022. The surging immigration that has kept aggregate GDP growing in real terms is straining our ability to house ourselves, provide healthcare, and even manage our borders. Unrestrained government spending – particularly, though not only, at the federal level – is hampering the Bank of Canada’s fight to reduce inflation, and adding to debts that will compromise our future ability to deliver services without more damaging taxes.

Businesses and households are feeling the pinch. The failure of today’s bloated federal government to deliver better services, legislate effectively, or frame a compelling vision of the national interest is undermining our vision of Canada as a country that works – a land of peace, order and good government. A focus on populist slogans rather than economic logic and practical implementation undermines confidence in our institutions and optimism about the future.

What does the C.D. Howe Institute – with its mission to raise living standards through fostering economically sound public policies, and its commitment to logic, facts and nonpartisanship – do in such fraught circumstances? We double down. We drive harder than ever to help policymakers and thought leaders understand the challenges, advance solutions, and improve our prospects.

On the research side, my own work highlights Canada’s struggles to equip its workers with capital investment equal to or better than their counterparts in other countries, notably the United States, and the changes in tax and other policies that could enhance our competitiveness. Greater fiscal transparency and accountability of senior and municipal governments is another personal focus. Don Drummond, Alexandre Laurin, and I combine forces on the Institute’s annual Shadow Federal Budget, which frames a more sustainable and growth-friendly track for the government’s spending, taxes and bottom line.

The output of the Institute’s research team is prolific, addressing challenges ranging from monetary policy and inflation, through trade, competition policy and business growth to taxation, healthcare delivery, labour markets and demography.
Institute events provide a platform for members and guests to engage in meaningful dialogues with policymakers, business leaders and renowned scholars that has no equal in Canada. Last year featured two Regent Debates on crucial topics such as immigration and competition in healthcare, a conference on tax reform, and dinners and luncheons addressed by federal and provincial cabinet ministers and party leaders, diplomats, business leaders, policymakers and eminent experts.

Our Intelligence Memos, podcasts, interviews and columns in major media outlets, including The Globe and Mail and The National Post, amplify the Institute’s messages, and contribute to its reputation for insight, independence and positive influence.

We are grateful for the C.D. Howe Institute’s donors, members, Fellows, authors, and other collaborators who help the Institute push through partisan noise and offer reasoned and practical insights to better Canadians’ lives in 2023. Combined with the Institute’s talented and professional team, you give me confidence that the outlook for Canada’s economy and Canadians’ living standards will be brighter in the years ahead.

Sincerely,

William B.P. Robson
The C.D. Howe Institute is on a mission to address economic policy challenges by providing non-partisan and impartial commentary on Canadian economic, social and fiscal issues that affect Canadians most. As we returned to a normalcy not seen since 2019, we’ve seen our economy contract while the national population swelled to unprecedented levels due to more people choosing to call Canada home. It made for an exciting year at the Institute, although not without challenges to overcome and opportunities to look forward to.

Despite the economic challenges of 2023, the C.D. Howe Institute continues to reflect on the past year with a sense of accomplishment by maintaining our reputation of being an impartial, non-partisan voice in the public policy landscape. Our esteemed authors, researchers and academics supported us through the publication of nearly 200 Intelligence Memos, which are addressed directly to government leaders and policymakers; 44 research studies on matters ranging from fiscal policy to health policy to energy policy; and authored more than 70 opinion pieces for Canada’s major print news dailies. We also continued to welcome prominent thinkers and experts to the CDHI Podcast with Michael Hainsworth, our ongoing in-depth interview series that discusses critical economic issues and its impacts on Canadians. Finally, I would like to acknowledge everyone who joined us or participated in our series of roundtable-luncheon events, webcast presentations and conferences. It’s thanks to all the hard work and positive energy of our members, colleagues and guests that make all that we do possible.

As always, we are grateful for your continued support and faith in the Institute as we work to respond to pertinent matters of economic, social and fiscal policy. The following pages will reveal further details of the C.D. Howe Institute’s research area priorities for 2023 and how we continue to bring together leaders in academia, business and government together to address the issues facing Canada’s economy and standard of living. Thank you to everyone who contributed to a successful 2023, and I am looking forward to future opportunities in 2024 and beyond.

Sincerely,

Duncan Munn
Thank you for making our work possible.

The C.D. Howe Institute relies on charitable support to deliver on its mission. We have modest resources. We have never received eight-figure endowments or major, multi-year government grants. All donations are purely philanthropic – the Institute does not accept any donations that stipulate a predetermined result or otherwise inhibit the independence of its staff and authors.

Targeted major gifts and event sponsorships enable supporters to bolster the Institute’s research and dissemination capacities in specific areas of interest. They complement the annual membership campaign, strengthening the Institute and enabling it to recruit scholars and support programs that enhance its ability to develop innovative solutions to policy challenges while ensuring its independence.

The mission of the C.D. Howe Institute’s research team is to help raise Canadians’ living standards, by generating practical ideas and useful information in support of policies that can contribute to that goal.

Initial questions at the formative stage of each of our peer-reviewed research publications include what is the larger impact of the policy issue we are addressing? And why does this question need to be a priority for the C.D. Howe Institute as well as policymakers? Alongside a rigorous review process, which itself is audited by external experts, these considerations ensure our research remains highly relevant to the key issues for today.

I am happy to say that our work continued to serve this calling in 2023.

Our research publications delved into the pandemic’s impact on government finances and accountability; the key drivers behind inflation’s path in Canada; problematic interactions between inflation and taxes; the implications of the US Inflation Reduction Act; Canadian small- and medium-sized enterprise growth, hurdles and access to finance; the cost and barriers to building housing; supply chains; and privacy legislation.

Among the research team’s signal accomplishments this past year, we were awarded our seventh Purvis Prive from the Canadian Economics Association for Steve Ambler, Thorsten Koeppl and Jeremy Kronick’s publication on the future of the Bank of Canada’s balance sheet.

In addition, 2023 saw the creation of a new long-term venue for deeper research and engagement on financial services and on monetary policy with practitioners and thought leaders in business, government, and academia, in the form of a new Centre of Financial and Monetary Policy. The activities of the Centre will be directed by Associate Vice-President Jeremy Kronick. I am pleased to also say Gherardo Caracciolo joined the research team as a Senior Policy Analyst to support the Centre’s work.

In its initial growth phase, the Centre has begun offering free access to customized datasets from past Institute publications, to assist with understanding and analyzing monetary policy. Through a new Domestic Stability Buffer Council, it now also provides independent assessment of the direction of the regulated capital buffer that the systematically important Canadian banks need to set aside to cover potential losses during periods of financial stress. And a new Financial Regulatory Excellence Initiative will help design and maintain a modern regulatory framework across financial services subsectors.
Aimed at being the foremost hub of influence and direction on critical and emerging issues in both financial and monetary policy, the Centre would not be possible without the generous donation of Hugh L. MacKinnon, the Institute’s Chair of the Board of Directors, who is also featured in these pages. We are immensely grateful for this donation.

This year also saw the Institute further discussion on pressing issues such as competition in our healthcare system and Canada’s immigration levels with two Regent Debates. Both topics were among the six priority areas for the Institute overall in 2023, illustrating the symbiosis between Institute events and communications products, and its research agenda.

Similarly, a special Policy Conference on personal and business taxation discussed reforms that could make our tax regimes more growth-friendly, fair, and effective. These discussions will feed into a renewed effort at tax policy research at the Institute in coming months, in turn informing another Institute priority, that of fiscal sustainability.

Looking towards 2024, our focus is also turning to issues that Canada will face in the review of the Canada-United States-Mexico Agreement, which will take place in 2026.

Our work would not be possible without the contributions of our staff, Fellows and esteemed Policy Council and Working Group members. Thank you for helping us offer meaningful research and insights from leading thinkers that open new doors for Canadians.

Sincerely,

Daniel Schwanen
OUR EXTERNAL REVIEW PROCESS

Institute publications undergo rigorous external review by academics and independent experts drawn from the public and private sectors. We are very grateful to those reviewers, some of whom are identified on page 22.

We evaluate potential reports using methods such as single and double-blind review, to ensure objectivity. The research and commentary – rather than the identity of authors and reviewers – is the paramount consideration. We work continually to improve the review process so that it is the best in class: it is audited every year by two academics or other professionals, and a formal response to their recommendations is provided and implemented by Institute management. Our peer-review process ensures the quality and integrity of the policy research, and we will not publish any study that, in our view, fails to meet the standards of that review process.

2023 Annual Report / C.D. Howe Institute
Throughout 2023, the Institute’s work emphasized that the federal government’s large post-pandemic deficits are imprudent and unfair to future generations. The Institute’s Shadow Federal Budget for 2023 suggested measures that involve more efficient spending, smarter taxation, and a fiscal strategy designed to prevent tax increases caused by excessive spending and borrowing – increases that would only exacerbate Canada’s economic difficulties. Complementing this work, a risk analysis by the Institute showed that the long-term federal debt is on an unsustainable path, given the high probability of events blowing it off course.

The Institute’s research team also analysed the impact of proposed changes to the Alternative Minimum Tax for individuals. These changes might disproportionately damage the charitable sector when compared to the slight increase in tax revenues we projected they will generate. Ottawa concurred with our analysis and revised these provisions in its latest budget.

The Institute continued to highlight the crucial importance of fiscal accountability at all levels of government, to good fiscal policy outcomes, emphasizing transparency and timeliness of budgets.

On the inflation front, the Bank of Canada continued, albeit at a slower pace, its tightening cycle in the first half of 2023, to combat inflation that stayed stubbornly above the 2 percent target. The continued increase in the overnight rate exacerbated the effect on the Bank’s finances, as the deposit rate on settlement balances outpaced the interest rate earned on the bonds purchased during the quantitative easing period. Institute research looked into this effect on the Bank’s finances, and also investigated how the central bank should approach these balance sheet issues from a risk governance perspective moving forward.

With signs of progress on inflation overall, the discussion turned towards the composition of the remaining inflation, both in terms of specific goods and services, and of the breakdown between demand-driven and supply-driven factors. An Institute study examined the latter, a crucial piece of information feeding into the discussion about when to start reducing interest rates.

Also on the theme of when the Bank might begin cutting rates, another paper looked at the importance of money growth in terms of predicting the future path of inflation. When inflation becomes de-anchored from its target, as it did during this recent surge, money growth returns as an important predictor. Money’s growth rate spiked in advance of recent inflation, and, depending on the measure, either slowed or fell for much of 2023 – the latter indicating a continued disinflation as price growth returns to target. An investigation published by the Institute of a range of different rules used by Central Banks – the so-called Taylor Rule which, broadly speaking, uses the output gap and inflation deviations from target to advise on the direction for the overnight rate – indicated that monetary policy had caught up and was now sufficiently tight.

Meanwhile, consumer price inflation rising well above the Bank of Canada’s target not only reduces affordability but also interacts with the tax system to increase tax burdens, often with limited transparency or legislative oversight. Research by the Institute highlighted problematic interactions between inflation and taxes, particularly concerning certain thresholds and amounts. Automatic inflation adjustments are preferable to ad hoc changes, which governments often present as tax relief, even though they merely prevent taxpayers from being worse off.

In addition to addressing pressing issues of fiscal and monetary sustainability, the Institute published important research aimed at enhancing the Canadian retirement system. One study, for instance, explored how straightforward modifications to tax regulations could boost retirement security, make the system more equitable across different savers, and enhance risk management in retirement. Another study highlighted the challenges posed by longer life expectancies and lower returns, which increase the likelihood that mandatory minimum withdrawals from Registered Retirement Income Funds could result in seniors having minimal income from their tax-deferred savings in their later years. It is crucial that government eagerness for revenue does not compel retirees to prematurely deplete their savings.

The C.D. Howe Institute accelerated its work in financial services and on business growth in 2023, two key pillars supporting the future prosperity of Canadians.

The Institute leveraged its already recognized and long-standing thought leadership on financial services, to launch the Centre on Financial and Monetary Policy, which will allow us to investigate a broader range of topics and dive deeper into each, providing more resources and opportunities for sustained policy impact.

Two initiatives have begun under the aegis of the Centre: The Financial Regulatory Excellence Initiative and the Domestic Stability Buffer Council. The former undertakes rigorous and independent assessments of existing and proposed financial sector regulations, identifies regulatory effectiveness and gaps, and promotes a common understanding of optimal regulation – one that balances the need for stability with the need for dynamism in the economy. The latter provides an independent evaluation of the appropriate size of the capital buffer in pursuit of OSFI’s mandate of contributing to public confidence in the Canadian financial system.

Research examined the banking collapses which dominated the headlines in early 2023, first with the fall of Silicon Valley Bank, followed soon after by that of a globally systemically important financial institution, Credit Suisse. Given the speed of events, the Institute produced a number of shorter memos and op-eds to address the immediate concerns – why did this occur, what was the likelihood of spillover to Canada? Later in the year, the Institute published an in-depth paper on the differences between Canadian and U.S. financial banking regulation, and what lessons these can provide for regulators as they seek to pre-empt future crises without resorting to stifling regulation.

Forward-looking concerns played a prominent role in our research in 2023. An Institute publication explored a regulatory framework for stablecoins that combines elements of financial stability, innovation and competition. Another investigated the benefits that Canadians – both households and businesses – could reap from a real-time rail retail payments system here at home, discussing obstacles to its adoption and how to get this system over the finish line.

The Institute also ramped up its work on the challenges of SME growth in 2023. Our research took a nuanced look at exactly where the access to capital gaps existed and found, as an example, a significant shortfall in the equity capital $2-5 million range. Another paper looked at the gap in commercialization of our ideas relative to what businesses are able to achieve south of the border. Governments and companies do well in their focus on research and development, but struggle to commercialize their ideas, and the paper recommended ways to address this specific gap in order to accelerate the success of smaller Canadian companies.

Economy-wide, however, the news on capital investment by Canada’s business sector continues to be bleak, as reported in the Institute’s annual “Tools for Workers” publication. It is clear that falling capital investments per worker – resulting in a growing chasm between Canada and the US in that regard – contributes to the stagnation of Canadians’ standards of living. Much of the Institute’s work in 2023 and into 2024 is being devoted to researching and fostering the adoption of policies that can reverse that trend.

The twin questions of economic pressures generated by the large influx of temporary migrants into Canada, and labor shortages which this influx partly sought to address, remained atop the C.D. Howe Institute’s human capital research agenda in 2023.

The Institute raised the alarm about the potential effects on productivity and wages of Canada’s rapidly rising influx of migrants, given that it coincided with low capital investments. This situation highlighted the need to manage the number of temporary residents: our work offered ways to reduce the number of international students and temporary foreign workers.

In this vein, an Institute study highlighted significant challenges in obtaining accurate estimates of the temporary resident population's size. It provided solutions to address this data gap, which in turn is crucial to our ability to understand the impact of the influx of temporary residents on the labour market and housing.

Research also emphasized addressing wage discrepancies to mitigate shortages among small and medium-sized enterprises. Recommendations included optimizing immigration utilization, enhancing human resource practices, and investing more in automation, highlighting the roles that both employers and governments can play.

At the same time, the Institute’s work continued to address labour shortages in specific occupations such as truck drivers, early childhood educators, and skilled trades workers. Proposed solutions focused on encouraging participation in training, removing barriers to employment — especially among women, youth, immigrants, and underrepresented communities — and enhancing retention efforts. We also studied the relative effectiveness of various work-integrated learning programs in easing graduates’ transition into the labour market, providing insights on how these programs can be more effectively deployed.

Meanwhile, multiple severe challenges continued to befall Canada’s healthcare system in 2023, including labour shortages and strained hospital capacity, too many Canadians lacking access to primary care, and a more challenging economic environment limiting new spending to address the issues, as the federal government has sought to expand pharmaceutical and dental coverage.

The Institute’s Healthcare Policy Research Initiative provided many insights for policymakers to navigate this challenging landscape, in the quest to improve access to and quality of care. Among our published work, we produced a consensus roadmap for reform and viable options to improve Canada's healthcare systems, in conjunction with a conference with health sector leaders to discuss priority issues.

Improving the capacity and quality of seniors’ care is critical to ensuring the sustainability of healthcare overall. An Institute study comparing Canada’s performance to peer countries shows that this remains a challenge and highlights areas for improvement. Similarly, expanding access to drug insurance resurfaced as a government priority. Expert commentary from Institute events and a study on improving coverage through a provincially led portable benefits model helped frame the discussions on expanding national pharmacare.

From offering practical solutions to labour shortages to providing valuable insights into healthcare policy reforms, the Institute remains committed to providing insights and solutions that advance Canadians’ living standards. Looking ahead, the Institute will continue its research efforts, engage with stakeholders, and support evidence-based policies that promote good outcomes in both the labour market and the healthcare sector.

The travails of attempts by Canada and its trade partners to reduce greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions at the same time as global demand for fossil fuels continued to increase featured prominently in the Institute’s 2023 research. The implications of US policy developments in particular on the choices facing Canadian industry and policymakers were examined in a paper on Canada’s potential responses to the massive “green” subsidies embedded in the United States’ Inflation Reduction Act of 2022, which impacted prospects for Canadian trade relations, supply chains, and investment.

The Institute commented on the need for greater realism and modelling in Ottawa’s emissions reduction efforts across all economic sectors. Notably, the Institute examined the impact of the zero-emission vehicle mandate from multiple perspectives. Several pieces touched on the need for greater investment in natural resources such as critical minerals, liquefied natural gas, and carbon capture and storage to mitigate emissions, within an environment of falling Canadian capital investment and weak productivity.

Several memos discussed the need to clarify the relationship between federal and provincial jurisdiction in policy and project approval, before and after the Supreme Court’s October 2023 ruling which found much of the Impact Assessment Act unconstitutional. Institute analysts also noted that the federal pause on collecting carbon tax on heating oil undermined the policy’s goals and credibility, to the point that a replacement “plan B”, which we outlined in some detail, might be necessary.

With rising Canadian electricity demand the Institute commented on nuclear investments in Ontario and the potential benefits and costs in other provinces. We also weighed in on the conflicts inherent in Ottawa’s plans to reduce emissions in Canada’s provincially-regulated collection of electricity systems, and on Alberta’s plans to revisit the framework regulating renewable energy.

Of note, the Institute hosted in 2023 its first post-pandemic in-person event outside of Toronto, a luncheon roundtable with Alberta Premier Danielle Smith.

We are developing exciting avenues of inquiry, and are bringing new ideas and new resources to bear on our energy policy research and our ability to disseminate it in 2024. Canada’s ability to use its resources to generate higher and sustainable standards of living for Canadians will remain at the heart of our work.

The Institute’s supply chain initiative examined, in a series of meetings throughout 2023, the implication of global and national supply chain challenges for Canadian industry, and ways that the federal government can address them as it develops its National Supply Chain Strategy. Ranging from the supply chain implications – and vulnerabilities – of low-carbon technologies, to investments needed in transportation infrastructure and strengthening internal trade, to human resources and software, and to how Canada can address security challenges threatening supply chains, the discussion will culminate in a number of reports in 2024 outlining a medium-term supply chain strategy for Canada. The strategy will highlight and build on the mutually reinforcing links between efficient and resilient supply chains and overarching policy objectives such as security, competitiveness, higher incomes, and affordability.

The use of digital technologies, and AI in particular, continued to spread rapidly in 2023, forcing policymakers into a reactive stance on issues as diverse as competition, taxation, cultural policies, privacy, and the governance of AI systems themselves. The Institute has commented in many of these areas, broadly speaking alerting policymakers to the dangers of hurting Canadian innovation and Canadian consumers through ill-thought out regulation targeting large companies, often seemingly just because of their size, rather than smart, evidence-based rules and action by governments to ensure Canadians are protected from actual harms to them while also reaping the benefits of innovation, open competition, fair taxation, and access to markets to products of their own culture.

INDEPENDENT AUDITOR’S REPORT

To the Members of
C.D. Howe Institute

Opinion

We have audited the financial statements of C.D. Howe Institute (the “Institute”), which comprise the statement of financial position as at December 31, 2023, and the statements of operations, changes in fund balances and cash flows for the year then ended, and notes to the financial statements, including a summary of significant accounting policies (collectively referred to as the “financial statements”).

In our opinion, the accompanying financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the Institute as at December 31, 2023, and the results of its operations and its cash flows for the year then ended in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations.

Basis for Opinion

We conducted our audit in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards (“Canadian GAAS”). Our responsibilities under those standards are further described in the Auditor’s Responsibilities for the Audit of the Financial Statements section of our report. We are independent of the Institute in accordance with the ethical requirements that are relevant to our audit of the financial statements in Canada, and we have fulfilled our other ethical responsibilities in accordance with these requirements. We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.

Responsibilities of Management and Those Charged with Governance for the Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations, and for such internal control as management determines is necessary to enable the preparation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

In preparing the financial statements, management is responsible for assessing the Institute’s ability to continue as a going concern, disclosing, as applicable, matters related to going concern and using the going concern basis of accounting unless management either intends to liquidate the Institute or to cease operations, or has no realistic alternative but to do so.

Those charged with governance are responsible for overseeing the Institute’s financial reporting process.
Auditor’s Responsibilities for the Audit of the Financial Statements

Our objectives are to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements as a whole are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error, and to issue an auditor’s report that includes our opinion. Reasonable assurance is a high level of assurance, but is not a guarantee that an audit conducted in accordance with Canadian GAAS will always detect a material misstatement when it exists. Misstatements can arise from fraud or error and are considered material if, individually or in the aggregate, they could reasonably be expected to influence the economic decisions of users taken on the basis of these financial statements.

As part of an audit in accordance with Canadian GAAS, we exercise professional judgment and maintain professional skepticism throughout the audit. We also:

- Identify and assess the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error, design and perform audit procedures responsive to those risks, and obtain audit evidence that is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our opinion. The risk of not detecting a material misstatement resulting from fraud is higher than for one resulting from error, as fraud may involve collusion, forgery, intentional omissions, misrepresentations, or the override of internal control.
- Obtain an understanding of internal control relevant to the audit in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the Institute’s internal control.
- Evaluate the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates and related disclosures made by management.
- Conclude on the appropriateness of management’s use of the going concern basis of accounting and, based on the audit evidence obtained, whether a material uncertainty exists related to events or conditions that may cast significant doubt on the Institute’s ability to continue as a going concern. If we conclude that a material uncertainty exists, we are required to draw attention in our auditor’s report to the related disclosures in the financial statements or, if such disclosures are inadequate, to modify our opinion. Our conclusions are based on the audit evidence obtained up to the date of our auditor’s report. However, future events or conditions may cause the Institute to cease to continue as a going concern.
- Evaluate the overall presentation, structure and content of the financial statements, including the disclosures, and whether the financial statements represent the underlying transactions and events in a manner that achieves fair presentation.

We communicate with those charged with governance regarding, among other matters, the planned scope and timing of the audit and significant audit findings, including any significant deficiencies in internal control that we identify during our audit.

1. Description of organization

The C.D. Howe Institute (the “Institute”) is an independent, not-for-profit, research and educational organization. It carries out independent analysis and critique of public policy issues and translates scholarly research for action by the government and the private sector. The Institute is a registered charity exempt from paying income taxes under Section 149(1) (f) of the Income Tax Act. The Institute was incorporated under Part II of the Canada Business Corporations Act on April 23, 1958 and was continued under the Canada Not-for-Profit Corporations Act on June 6, 2014.

2. Summary of significant accounting policies

The financial statements of the Institute have been prepared in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations published by the Chartered Professional Accountants of Canada using the deferral method and reflect the following significant accounting policies:

Contributions

Contributions are recorded as received, except when restricted through specific direction from the donor, in which case they are deferred until eligible expenses are incurred. Contributions of materials and services used in the normal course of the Institute’s operations are recorded at their fair value when the amounts can be reasonably estimated. Endowment contributions are recognized as direct increases in the Fund balance. Transfers from the Endowment Fund to deferred revenue are recognized in keeping with the agreements with the Endowers.

Financial instruments

Financial assets and financial liabilities are initially recognized at fair value when the Institute becomes a party to the contractual provision of the financial instrument. Subsequently, all financial instruments are measured at amortized cost, except for investments. The Institute has elected to use the fair value option to measure investments, with any subsequent changes in fair value recorded in the Statement of operations.

Financial assets measured at amortized cost are assessed at each reporting date for indications of impairment. If such impairment exists, the asset is written down and the resulting impairment loss is recognized in the Statement of operations.

Cash and cash equivalents

Cash and cash equivalents are defined as cash and interest bearing deposits that are redeemable on demand, and Canadian securities with original maturity dates of three months or less.

Investments

Investments are accounted for on the settlement date basis and any transaction costs are expensed as incurred.
2. Summary of significant accounting policies (continued)

Capital assets

Capital asset additions are recorded at cost at the time of acquisition. Amortization is calculated using the straight-line basis at 33-1/3% per annum for electronic equipment and computer hardware and software and 10% per annum for furniture, fixtures and equipment. Conference equipment is amortized on the straight-line basis over six years. Signage and leasehold improvements are amortized on the straight-line basis over the term of the lease.

Publications

Publications are not recorded as inventory. Costs are accrued for publications in progress. All costs of publications that have entered the production stage by the end of the year are expensed.

Deferred capital contributions

Deferred capital contributions relate to funds received for office leasehold improvements and are amortized on the straight-line basis over the term of lease.

Deferred rent

Deferred rent, consisting of tenant allowances, free rent and reduced rent, is amortized on the straight-line basis over the term of the lease.

Use of estimates

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect amounts reported therein. Actual results may differ from such estimates used in preparing the financial statements. Estimates are used when accounting for a number of items including, but not limited to accrued liabilities, deferred revenue and the useful life of capital assets.

Description of funds

Operating Fund

Amounts received, used or held for the research and educational goals of the Institute, are recorded in the Operating Fund.

Endowment Funds

Endowment Funds represent amounts received which are externally endowed, together with any designated unspent investment income.

Invested in Capital Assets Fund

The Invested in Capital Assets Fund records the Institute’s cost of capital assets, less accumulated amortization and unamortized deferred capital contributions.
3. Commitments
The Institute has a lease commitment for premises located at 67 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario. During 2023, the lease was extended for a further six months and expires on May 31, 2025. Future minimum commitments (excluding operating costs) under the lease are as follows:

The Roger Phillips Endowment Fund was established to advance social policy dialogue. The capital is to be invested and the investment income earned is available to fulfill the purpose of the endowment.

The Jack Mintz Endowment Fund was established to support an annual visit and economic seminar by an eminent expert. The capital is to be invested and the investment income is available to fulfill the purpose of the endowment.

The Special Studies Endowment Fund was established to support special projects which would otherwise be difficult to fund through annual membership contributions. The capital is to be invested and the investment income earned is being retained in the Fund to fulfill the purpose of the endowment.

The Sylvia Ostry Endowment Fund was established to stage an annual lecture in Sylvia Ostry’s name, featuring a distinguished speaker on a topic related to international economic policy.

The capital is to be invested and the investment income earned is available to fulfill the purpose of the endowment.

The Monetary Policy Endowment Fund was established during 2009 to support research, publications and events resulting in further understanding of, and offer policy advice on, Canadian monetary policy. The capital is to be invested and the investment income earned is being retained in the Fund to fulfill the purpose of the endowment.

During the year, in accordance with the wishes of the Endowers, $200,417 ($528,443 in 2022) of accumulated realized investment income was transferred to deferred revenue for the purpose of funding future activities over the fiscal years 2024 through to 2027.

The Endowment Funds have been invested in long-term investments (Note 4).
9. Pension plan

The Institute sponsors a group registered retirement savings plan, a group tax free savings plan and a defined pension plan (“Dbplus”) for its employees. The Institute's liability is limited to matching contributions for the year and these amounted to $154,979 ($141,162 in 2022).

The Institute sponsors a defined contribution registered pension plan and contributions for the year amounted to $56,503 ($47,617 in 2022).

10. Guarantees

In the normal course of business, the Institute enters into agreements that meet the definition of a guarantee. The Institute's primary guarantees are as follows:

(a) The Institute has provided indemnities under a lease agreement for the use of operating facilities. Under the terms of the agreement, the Institute agrees to indemnify the counterparties for various items including, but not limited to, all liabilities, loss, suits, and damages arising during, on or after the term of the agreement. The maximum amount of any potential future payment cannot be reasonably estimated.

(b) Indemnity has been provided to all directors and/or officers of the Institute for various items including, but not limited to, all costs to settle suits or actions due to involvement with the Institute, subject to certain restrictions. The Institute has purchased directors’ and officers’ liability insurance to mitigate the cost of any potential future suits or actions. The term of the indemnification is not explicitly defined, but is limited to the period over which the indemnified party served as a trustee, director or officer of the Institute. The maximum amount of any future payment cannot be reasonably estimated.

(c) In the normal course of business, the Institute has entered into agreements that include indemnities in favour of third parties, such as confidentiality agreements, engagement letters with advisors and consultants, outsourcing agreements, leasing contracts, information technology agreements and service agreements. These indemnification agreements may require the Institute to compensate counterparties for losses incurred by the counterparties as a result of breaches in representation and regulations or as a result of litigation claims or statutory sanctions that may be suffered by the counterparties as a consequence of the transaction. The terms of these indemnities are not explicitly defined and the maximum amount of any potential reimbursement cannot be reasonably estimated.

The nature of these indemnification agreements prevents the Institute from making a reasonable estimate of the maximum exposure due to the difficulties in assessing the amount of liability, which stems from the unpredictability of future events and the unlimited coverage offered to counterparties. Historically, the Institute has not made any significant payments under such or similar indemnification agreements and therefore no amount has been accrued in the financial statement, with respect to these agreements.

11. Risk management

The Institute follows a Statement of Investment Policies, which provides the investment objectives, performance expectations and guidelines for the management of its investments.
Market risk

Market risk is the risk that the value of an investment will fluctuate as a result of changes in market prices, whether those changes are caused by factors specific to the specific individual investment or factors affecting all securities traded in the market. To mitigate this specific risk, the Institute invests in a diversified portfolio of investments in accordance with the Institute’s Statement of Investment Policies.

Interest rate risk

The Institute is exposed to interest rate risk with respect to its investments. Changes in the prime interest rate will have a positive or negative impact on the Institute’s interest income. Such exposure will increase accordingly should the Institute maintain higher levels of investments in the future.

Credit risk

Credit risk is the risk that one party to a financial instrument will fail to discharge an obligation and cause the other party to incur financial loss. The Institute’s investment policies define permitted investments and provide guidelines and restrictions on acceptable investments, which minimizes credit risk.

Foreign exchange risk

Foreign exchange risk is the risk that the fair value of future cash flows of a financial instrument will fluctuate because of changes in foreign exchange rates. The Institute invests in non-Canadian equities and is therefore directly exposed to currency risk, as the value of equities denominated in other currencies will fluctuate due to changes in exchange rates.
